Dear Rita

Further to our conversation, I have looked again at the proposals.

The concept that is articulated for Bank Square is not a strong one. The future viability of it as an urban square relies on its appropriate animation. That is compromised by the relationship with the Castle Court Service Yard and its 'interruption' of Berry Street. For a long time now, there have been discussions with Westfield in relation to reorganisation of the service arrangements and the opportunity to restore the line of Berry Street. It seems disappointing that the proposals being presented now do not seek to address this.

Kind Regards

Andrew
